CHALLENGE ACCEPTED

Four top-flight producers discuss the challenges and opportunities behind Icewine; Ontario's luxurious, eminently gift-worthy calling card.

Producing high-quality wine is a demanding undertaking at the best of times, but fashioning first-class Icewine takes the endeavour to a whole new level. From protecting grapes from the ravages of winter-hungry birds to harvesting in freezing temperatures in the middle of the night followed by a long, difficult fermentation, making Icewine is not for the faint of heart. But for those willing to dare, the results are glorious.

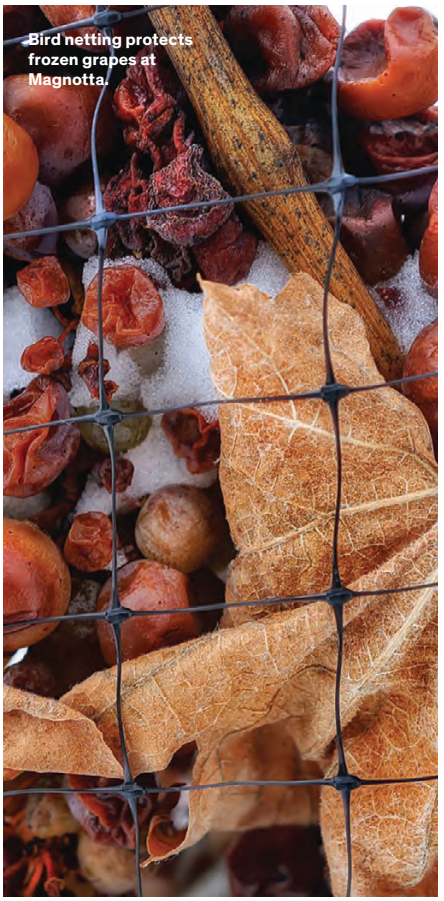
In many ways, what we want from our Icewine grapes is similar to what we look for when we make sparkling wine," explains Daniel Speck, co-owner of Henry of Pelham. "You want the flavours, of course, but you want to emphasize freshness and acidity. The process of making Icewine gives you less juice per grape, and compared to what the grapes for our table wines give us, the difference is significant: about 6:1 or 7:1. Ontario makes exceptional Icewine, and there has been some experimentation that I like. As we continue to explore the style, I'd be interested in seeing Icewines that tell a terroir story, perhaps through single-vineyard expressions."

Vidal is a physically robust grape with relatively thick skin," explains Pondview's winemaker Fred Di Profio. "It can weather the weather, so to speak. We like our grapes to experience a few freeze-and-thaw cycles before we harvest. This releases the flavour precursors we're looking for; it's like a pre-harvest maceration that concentrates the flavours in the pulp. There's always risk involved in agriculture, with the weather especially. We weren't able to harvest the 2019 Vidal grapes until February 8, three weeks after we brought in the grapes for our Riesling Icewine. It warmed up and we just didn't have another significant cold weather event until then. Just one of the reasons Icewine is so difficult to make."

Riesling is brilliant for making Icewine," says Inniskillin's Bruce Nicholson, a veteran of nearly 35 vintages. "Even in warmer years, Riesling gives you the natural acidity and balance that you need to make a great wine. Legally, you need -8°C before you harvest, but I want -10°C, and you can never know when you'll get that. Within a few weeks, you can predict when you'll harvest the grapes for your table wines, but with Icewine it could be as early as November, or you might have to wait till January. Making Icewine takes patience and knowledge and it comes with a lot of labour and risk, but it's extremely rewarding."



Bird netting protects frozen grapes at Magnotta.

“For me, the key is making high-quality Icewine that is consistent year after year,” says Peter Rotar, winemaker at Magnotta. “And you get that with care and work, in the vineyard and in the winery. Vidal is robust and will hang well, but even so, I like to harvest the Vidal before Christmas. But we don’t get to choose when we harvest. Last year we brought in the Vidal on February 19. That was when the temperatures were suitable, around -9 or -10°C. I cold-ferment the grapes for three to four weeks in temperature-controlled stainless steel tanks, and then the wine is aged for five to six months, also in stainless.”

CHAMPAGNE

BOLLINGER SPECIAL CUVÉE BRUT CHAMPAGNE
AC, France
TASTING NOTE: Disgorged in the second half of 2019, the latest release of Bollinger's NV Brut Special Cuvée is based on the 2015 vintage, complemented by around 60% reserve wines. The wine is still quite tightly wound after its recent disgorgement, opening in the glass with notes of crisp yellow orchard fruit, freshly baked bread, clear honey and orange peel, with little sign of the nuttiness to come with bottle age. On the palate, it's medium to full-bodied, muscular and incipiently textural, with a deep core, ripe acids and a pinpoint mousse. This isn't the most incisive vintage of Special Cuvée, but it's powerful and vinous and will have fine gastronomic potential with a little bottle age. Drink date: 2022-2035. TASTING NOTE: This is a notably rich chardonnay with generous aromas of cream corn, ripe apple, nutmeg, vanillin and toast. TASTING NOTE: ... ripe fruit bouquet that includes pear, melon and light lemon ... green apple, vanilla and a whiff of strawberries. On the palate, it ... displays crisp, lively, and refreshing acidity ... pears, apricots, light green apple and white peaches with a tinge of flint. The acidity remains slightly elevated, but I felt it is integrated and balanced with the minerality. The finish is pleasant, dry and palate filling. TASTING NOTE: A spicy Chianti Classico Riserva showing dried red plums, dried roses, mahogany, forest floor, cedar, white truffles, wet earth and leather. But it's all so fresh and delightful. REMO FARINA AMARONE DELLA VALPOLICELLA CLASSICO 2016

TASTING NOTE: Farina always presents slightly reserved but authentic and traditional wines that have a fine sense of balance. Not trying to wow with glossy fruit, but sturdy and understated. It is full bodied and the balance is excellent with moderate tannin. There is some alcohol heat (15.5%) but again still in proportion. Excellent length. Best 2021 to 2026.
